Burns staff decides

Employees join union

The Union cafeteria staff employed by Burns Catering Service have joined a labour union.

At 2 pm yesterday two representatives of the Building Service Employees' Union held a vote for the cafeteria staff at which 27 of the 39 present chose to become affiliated with the union. With the exception of three or four cooks, some of whom claimed they were already unionized, the entire staff paid the $2 registration fees.

There will be a meeting today in the Union at 10 am at which Paul Jaquet from the Quebec Federation of Labour local will discuss the cafeteria staff's new powers as union members. Jaquet said he expected trouble from Burns on the unionization, but he was confident that his organization's moves were legally sound.

A Burns' administrator said last night that he had no knowledge of union activities at Burns' McGill branch. He added that unionization was the prerogative of the employees and that management had nothing to do with it.

When asked if he thought joining the union was a good thing, one of the counter men said, "I think so, I hope so". Concerning the possibility of reprisals by Burns he said, "The man from the union says they can not fire us... I don't know what Burns will do".

Students' Society President Sharon Sholzberg was pleased with the cafeteria staff's decision. "If I can speak for all the students, and I think I can, we are extremely happy to see that the workers are unionized and will have the same opportunities as other organized labourers in the Province," she said.

UGEQ affirms support of Viet Nam protest

by IRWIN BLOCK
News Editor

The Union Générale des Etudiants du Québec has reaffirmed its support for a massive demonstration and protest against American aggression in Viet Nam, now re-scheduled for February 18.

The decision was taken last night after a two-hour meeting of UGEQ's co-ordinating committee — COMCOR.

Organizers of the demonstration, who postponed the original February 11 date because UGEQ's position remained unclear, also announced that Professor Staughton-Lynd will be the principal speaker at the protest meeting prior to the demonstration. It is expected to be one of the largest ever held in Montreal.

Staughton-Lynd recently returned from a trip to Viet Nam, China and the Soviet Union along with American Marxist Herbert Aptheker and Thomas Hayden, a past-president of the Students for a Democratic Society. He is one of the leaders of the Viet Nam protest movement in the U.S. and an Assistant Professor of History at Yale University.

Because of the one-week postponement, exact details of the protest have yet to be worked out. Originally, a public meeting was to have been held at Plateau Hall. Organizers say that the original slate of speakers — including Quebec NDP leader Robert Cliche — still stands. Chansonnier Gilles Vigneault and folk-singer Phil Ochs were to perform.

The demonstration will form at Dominion Square about 4:30 pm and proceed to the U.S. Consulate on McGregor Street. The organizing committee, meanwhile, sent a telegram to Prime Minister Pearson saying it was "appalled by Gordon Churchill's call for Canada to aid the United States in Viet Nam."

Parties make final plans

Final campaign plans for campus political parties were announced yesterday by Chairman Paul Caron.

Robert Cliche will speak on behalf of the NDP today at 1 pm in the Union Ballroom. Tomorrow Peter Marcovitz of the CTCM will address students in Room 123-4 of the Union.

On Wednesday the Hon. Davie Fulton appear in the Ballroom on behalf of the Conservatives. Speaker and place for the YCL's programme have not yet been finalized. Eric Kierans spoke to the Liberals yesterday.

Prof. Laurier Lapierre and Prof. Mallory will act as Speakers of the House for the Monday night session of Parliament. Before the Friday election Radio McGill will broadcast an interview with the five party leaders.

Kierans raps US economic control

by ROBERT TAYLOR

Eric Kierans, Provincial Minister of Health, called for the removal of the Canadian economy from "under the heel of the United States" in a speech to the McGill Liberal Club yesterday.

Speaking of his letters to the American Department of Commerce, he said that Ottawa had accepted "guidelines which would result in loss of sovereignty" for Canadian businesses.

He said that a situation had been created where Canadian industry was affected to too great a degree by US commerce.

On the subject of nationalization of industries, he said that the expenditure of money on nationalization showed "a lack of initiative in the use of money".

He pointed out, however, that in the case of electricity corporations of Quebec it was necessary to exploit the existing resources.

Discussing state control of Sidbec, the proposed Quebec steel complex, he said that the management and development of an institution were more important than the ownership.

"We must not be held back by the 18th century concept of laissez-faire", he explained.

Supporting the idea of industrial regroupment, Kierans said that a host of small firms will rarely be effective and will never be able to compete on the world level.

He pointed out that Canada finds itself in an unfortunate situation in that it borders on a country with fifteen times its economic power.

"Even slight ripples" on the American market create sizeable fluctuations in the Canadian financial world, he continued.

He called for a more flexible rate of exchange to enable the Canadian market to adjust more easily to changes in the United States.

He termed the 6% ceiling on bank rates "a block to the construction of a really competitive financial system".

ERIC KIERANS spoke yesterday, but not about health. The controversial Health Minister once again ventured into the field of economics, a field which has brought him into international prominence recently.

The God that failed

The news that University of New Brunswick has opted out of the World University Service comes as a welcome relief. The Central Office at Toronto appears to have become, in the words of Jane Massey, campus WUS chairman, "a collecting agency."

The McGill SC heard at its February 1 meeting from the WUS General Secretary,

Mr. Meyer. Although McGill had been a "leading force" in WUS during the 1950s, said Mr. Meyer, its participation has been falling off rapidly. Last year, he regretfully added, McGill had managed to squeeze into twenty-fifth place out of thirty-three runners.

It is something of a pity that McGill could not have finished in thirty-fourth place. WUS over the years has joined that long list of mindless, soupkitchenry dogooderies that passes for enlightened welfare among advanced industrial societies. For the sons and daughters of the affluent middleclass, it supplies not only an opportunity for meeting those of one's own caste but also provides the balm necessary to the liberal conscience in an age when the rich are getting richer and the poor nowhere.

Mr. Meyer should recognize that the writing is on the wall. His sad little efforts to make the McGill body politic feel guilty about its supposed Scrooginess have boomed. Let him betake himself back to his comfortable padded headquarters in Toronto where those who wage the war against world poverty may continue to do so in the manner to which they have all too obviously become accustomed; there beside the gleaming telephone, with the afternoon sun glinting fitfully on the vast expanse of mahogany, where moth does not enter and rust does not defile, he may reflect on the injustices of a world which, despite the best efforts of Fabian morality and Keynesian-managed capitalism, continues in its intractable way to be unjust.

From the Ivory Tower

MODEL PARLIAMENT

The Model Parliament campaign is in full swing. The election is on Friday. The parliamentary sitting is on Monday. But what is Model Parliament, and why is it?

In the past, it has been referred to as "a game that campus political parties play with each other," "a farcical melodrama," or "idle chit-chat". According to the constitution of Model Parliament, its objective is "to further student knowledge of contemporary politics and the constitutional running of the country and to promote student interest and activity in politics."

The reality of Model Parliament lies somewhere between these two opposing conceptions. It aspires to the serious educational ideal and never completely reaches it. In fact, the essential condition for the success of this activity is student participation. Without a student audience, the Model Parliament becomes little more than a highly formal chit-chatty re-warming of talked-but-cold issues.

The Daily is unable to report even a representative portion of the debates, due to the length and complexity of the discussions. No real appreciation of the session will be had without attending at least one of the two Monday sittings. The campaign will last this week only, so as to concentrate student interest in a short period of time. There will be only two parliamentary sessions, each with a well-known and interesting personality as Speaker of the House. In this way it is hoped that only the most important issues will be debated and that the sittings will not be boring and drawn-out.

If the election and sittings succeed in enlightening those interested in the working of government; if they allow those students concerned to demonstrate how they might run Canada's affairs; and if they give students an inkling of the problems faced by the government in trying to run the country, then Model Parliament is no mere game but a legitimate and important campus activity.

Many questions will be answered by the election on Friday. Last year's cross-Canada Model Parliament results gave: 11 Liberal governments, 4 Conservative and 3 New Democratic Party victories. Is the NDP on the upsurge? In the past years the parties in Ottawa have shown interest in the results inasmuch as they have reflected the voting habits of the students' parents. Will the students follow their parents' example of refusing a majority to any party?

Campus platforms have become increasingly independent of the national party platforms. Because of this, it is important for students who intend to vote to examine carefully all the platforms (to be published in the Daily) and to vote accordingly and not according to how you "always" vote. Model Parliament is an opportunity for university political parties to introduce ideas along the lines they consider important. This must be remembered by the voter in order to understand the spirit of this activity. Just as the election is a direct reflection of the students' political attitude, so the sitting is a demonstration of the ability and maturity of the student representative. Most important it is hoped that the members of parliament will respect the decision of the electorate and conduct the business of the House so that the elected government will have a chance to present its full programme for discussion. The role of the opposition parties should not be to defeat the government for the sole purpose of taking over the reins of government. The latter course leads to sterile wrangling and defeats the educational purpose of Parliament. Such attempts are farcical since the Government as such wields no power.

Bilingualism is an important aspect of the Federal Parliament which should be utilized. We are attempting to give students an impression of the Federal system of government and so members should make use of both official languages of the Canadian government. In order to reflect the bilingual nature of Parliament, one of the Speakers of the House will be French, the other English.

An unfortunate feature that has plagued past Model Parliaments is the disrupting of debates by procedural wrangling. This has been due mainly to an insufficient mastery of basic Parliamentary procedural rules by the delegates and party leaders. These members will be representing masses of McGill students and are, in the eyes of the public, representatives of McGill University. In both these capacities they have a duty to learn the procedural rules and at the same time to refrain from interminable procedural wrangling so as not to make a hideous farce out of a potentially worthwhile event.

The role of the Chairman of Model Parliament, as I see it, is to be an arbiter between the parties and an interpreter of the established rules. As I have been appointed by the Students' Council, I consider myself a representative of that body and responsible to it. As such I would welcome any criticism or suggestions concerning the conduct of the Model Parliament.

LETTERS

A Classic

Dear Sir:

Mr. Ship's letter in Monday's Daily interested me greatly as a classic example of complete fallacy of logic. Most obvious is his complete ignorance of the basic question. This does not have anything to do with Ottawa, Washington, or Viet-Nam, but simply involves the constitutional right of the SC to officially represent the student body of McGill at a demonstration which the majority do not support. Beyond this, it contains numerous other fallacies, but they merely build false facts upon irrelevancies to further confuse the issue. I ask Mr. Ship to give us "hows" and "whys", not just hasty generalizations. Furthermore, I resent his deterministic attitude in regard to myself. I came to McGill and joined the Students' Society here of my own free will, but at that time the executive represented something far different than it does today. In the democratic society that Mr. Ship holds so dear, I can exercise my freedom of choice (for that is the essence of democracy) and disassociate myself as freely as I joined, if I find that that executive resists all attempts to change it from within. Alan H. Kirshen, BSc 2

Vive la Différence

Dear Sir:

In the headline story in the McGill Daily of February 7th, certain statements were attributed to me which are merely the writer's interpretation of my comments.

I was quoted as describing the Faculté des Lettres at Université de Montréal as "progressive", and Ecole Polytechnique as "reactionary". I actually described the latter as being "more conservative" than certain other faculties at the university. I realize that there are many who believe that conservatism and reaction are synonymous, but in the case of Ecole Polytechnique, the adjective "reactionary" is not only a word which I did not use; it is also an entirely unwarranted description of that Faculty.

Democracy may hamper modernization of Africa

by ELLEN ROSEMAN

A democratic system is not necessarily beneficial to the political modernization of Africa, according to an African affairs expert. "In fact, it may even be an obstacle."

Professor A. Castagno, head of African Studies at Boston University, said in an address to CUSO yesterday that North Americans have the attitude that political democracy in the developing nations is an end in itself.

But democracy is only useful as a means to modernization, and is not necessarily the only means, since modernization can also be effected under an oligarchy or a one-party system.

He then defined what he meant by modernization. He said that it included industrialization of the economy, secularization of ideas and an increase in the standard of living.

Because such modernization is essentially forward-looking and involves a commitment to the future, Professor Castagno said, it comes into conflict with the essentially past-based philosophy of the African nations.

"In our society, the status of an individual is not defined by his birth. But in Africa, the past is everything, and a man cannot move out of the class in which he was born."

He said that modernization implies a higher degree of egalitarianism, which conflicts with African society, where collectivity is more important than the individual.

"In order for African modernization to be successful, the people must recognize themselves as important members of the society, and forget the limitations of their birth."

Burns ...

Internal Affairs Vice President Marty Edelstein added that as indirect employers of the cafeteria staff, the Students' Society could not legally press for the move to unionization.

Jaquet said he had his doubts about some of Burns' personnel practices. "Any employee can be fired just like that and employees are shifted from one location to another without notice", he said. Present salaries were not realistic, according to Jaquet, and he said there were no allotments for vacations and sickness. Apparently none of Burns' other locations are unionized.

The QFL found out about the situation in the Union when they organized McGill's maintenance staff in November of last year, and through articles in the Daily on Burns' practices.

New residences to be constructed at Macdonald

Completion of new experimental residences for married students at Macdonald College is expected in March, Dr. H.G. Dion, Vice-Principal of the College, announced this weekend.

The 28-unit motel-style building will replace the existing army-barrack-style units erected in 1946 for war-veteran students and their families.

The new project is experimental, and if it proves successful, more residences of the same type will be constructed. The building will have flat roofing, brick facing, masonry walls and interior plaster partitions.

Sixteen of the units will contain one bedroom and 12 will have two bedrooms, in addition to living room, dining hall, kitchen and bathroom. They will be heated electrically and equipped with refrigerators, stoves and a communal laundry.

In fact, Dr. Scott will speak on Thursday, at the same time and place as listed in the advertisement, and the Plattsburgh trip will take place on Friday.
